Seniors gathered for their traditional retreat at Fort Flagler, a place where the graduating class goes to get away from all the stress and get better acquainted. This year the senior class took full responsibility for all the programs and the entertainment during elections, a great way to prepare for the leadership role that awaits them. # Together We Stand

The campus buzzes as new and returning students swamp the hall of the administration building for the first day of classes. A sea of faces floats past you.

Extreme differences strike you, and you realize that your new classmates vary as greatly as night as day.

Days fly by while names link with the faces. After the first few weeks the sea of faces becomes a line of friends. These individuals exhibit a rich variety of backgrounds, physical appearances, talents, and personalities. Each face stands out in your mind for different reasons. Your friends are comedians and athletes, musicians and socialites, artists and intellectuals.

The contrasting qualities of the separate people complement each other. Any talent missing in one is made up for by the same talent in another. This combination leads to a more complete group. The school is made stronger "by the relationships that are formed with people that are different," stated James Davis. Although you observe hundreds of differences among your friends, you realize that, when standing together, the entire spectrum is represented. A strong group results from the unity. Each person adds a vital piece to the picture. We are indeed strong when we stand together.

President Ryan Dye

The president of the senior class, Ryan Dye, joined the Auburn family as a junior from Wenatchee, Washington.

As a resident assistant, Ryan has free time during the afternoon, and you might catch him cleaning his hall, sleeping, or practicing the piano or organ. Some of his hobbies include water and snow skiing and reading philosophical and educational books.

Ryan plans to go to college and become a music teacher “to help other people appreciate and enjoy music better.”

Class of 1994

Juniors . . . Already?

Because the class of 1994 is the biggest class with more activities to plan, and more school work to do, they are learning more about responsibility, involvement, and possibly stress.

The officers of the class of '94 include many new students. President Brian Harris, from Olympia, Washington, said, "I was happy to be elected president, even though most people either don't know me or haven't known me very long. I'm very excited about this year. I'm going to try my very best to make it a good year for everyone."

Natalie Carroll, also from Olympia, Washington, was elected class treasurer.

Another first year student is class secretary Raema Rafuse, who comes from Port Hardy, British Columbia.

Karin Gall, social vice-president said, "I love our class and am proud to be a part of it!"

"I don't think there's a better class to be in," states Michael Wolcott, sports coordinator.

The junior class has lots of work cut out for them. Among their activities this year is the Junior-Senior banquet, an important occasion where memories are made for a lifetime.

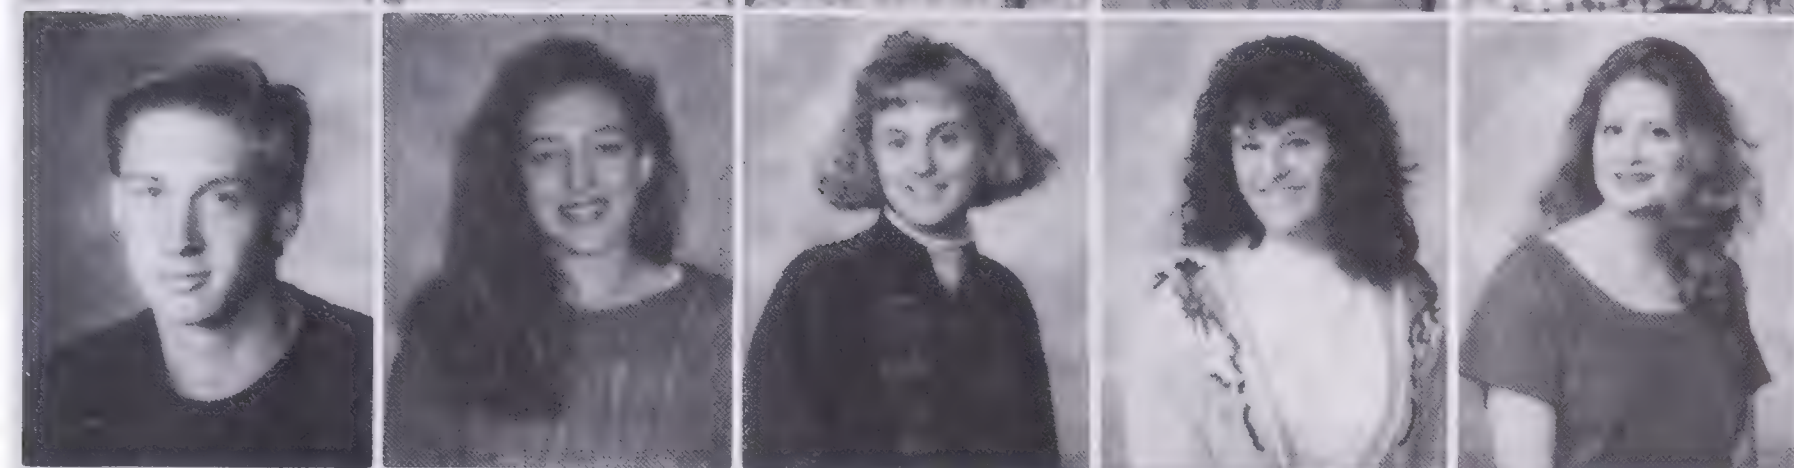

The junior class has progressed and added many new faces. The class of '94 is unique and fun and certainly livens up the school!

Sabbath by the Lake

Groups of people hurried out of the chapel.

"Is this the right bus?"

"There's room for two more over here."

Calls like these echoed between the buses, and then we were off to the ASB mountain outing at Sunset Lake. After reaching the lake, we headed up the hill for Sabbath School.

Afterwards we had time to relax and take a hike or talk to friends. MaryLou Bullard commented, "I liked the break from the campus and the free time."

After lunch everyone walked back to the amphitheater for church. Elder Larry Kositsin, who is in charge of chaplain services for the San Joachin Community Hospital in Bakersfield, California, talked to us about life and death situations. Should we pull the plug on someone who is brain dead and in a coma? There were several different opinions, and it sparked quite a debate from the students, causing many to confront such issues for the first time.

Soon it was time to load up the buses and head back to campus. The mountain outing had been a success.

Touring History

Famous historical sites, raging rapids, and mountains of wheat—along with many other stops, were the highlights of the annual Northwest History Tour, lead by Mr. Miller. This year's trip was "Uncle Ron's" sixteenth time to see the sights.

The History Tour is a whirlwind, cross-country trip in the school bus, that encompasses three different states. Most stops were for their historical significance, such as Fort Clatsop and the Whitman Mission. The trip took five days, and by the time it was done the students had compiled page after page of notes in their journals, which had to be written in

"We felt like Lewis and Clark!"

and updated after each stop.

The best part of the journey for most of the students was the raft trip down the Salmon River. Students were allowed to ride in large rafts, or take their chances on one of the inflatable kayaks. Several hours later, when it was over, the students were soaking wet but reluctant to leave.

The History Tour was an exciting and enjoyable way to learn about the Northwest by actually being able to see first hand where it all began. "We felt like Lewis and Clark!" joked James Culmore and Ryan Dye. Hopefully everyone can get a chance to go sometime during their academy years.

Sibling Bonding

Siblings . . . Together? . . . at AAA!

There comes a time for many students when a brother or a sister joins them here at AAA.

To some people the thought of a brother or sister joining them isn't very pleasant. Some are nervous that their sibling will take over their lives and friends; some worry that their sibling will embarrass them.

But most people are happy to have family here with them. "I was glad that I was here for my sister because being a freshman can be scary," said Jessie Robinson. The feeling is very mutual for the new students that have a brother or a sister already here. Louis Robinson said, "It was nice having someone here who knew everything. They can lead you around and show you how everything works."

For some students, especially dorm students, it's nice to have some sort of family nearby—especially if they have been away for awhile. After her younger sister arrived, Laura Gray stated, "It is nice to be a sister again."

Whether the initial thought of a sibling joining you brought joy or tears, there is one thing that almost all could agree on—being here together does bring you closer.

On Task — Bringing Us Together

"On Task brings a lot of different feelings to different people. For some, it was a time to catch up with old friends, and for others it was a time to meet new people. "It gave me a great opportunity to meet new friends," Jody Cooper sums up.

The day began with the student body meeting in Dower Chapel. From there everyone hurried to the gym to participate in different games. Students divided into teams according to class, providing the first opportunity to show off class spirit. One of the favorite games was similar to volleyball, where masses of students struggled to put the gigantic ball over the net.

"... first opportunity to show off class spirit."

After every activity, the focus of attention shifted to the chapel for different presentations. It gave new students the chance to learn about various organizations and activities.

Following dinner, students presented a special program to conclude the exciting day. Besides the usual competition between classes, there was also a time to show support for a different class by performing their class yell.

"On Task" gave students the chance to relax, before diving into schedules and homework. It brought us closer together as a school, and prepared us to face a new year with new spirit!

Talent In The Making

Coming into a new school can be hard. Often the new student does not know a single person or the school routine. Soon, however, the student makes friends and settles into the scheme of things. The class of 1996 has come together and shown a lot of spirit in spite of being together for only a short time.

Their activities have included class parties and officer elections. Mrs. Miller, one of the class

“They are

sponsors, commented, “They are a very energetic and vibrant class.”

Each class has a wide variety of talents and theirs is just beginning to shine through. As freshmen they have a very full schedule. They work all morning and go to classes all afternoon. It is very hard to keep up with everything, but they have done a very good job.

Remembering...

...A Special Veterans' Day Chapel

On Wednesday, November 11, our school had a special chapel to honor our veterans from the faculty and throughout the nation. Jody Cooper said, "I didn't realize that there were staff members that were in the war. I enjoyed listening to them."

So this day would not slip by unnoticed, the school invited three of the staff to narrate their experiences in the service of this country.

To start out, Matt Walch and Roger Sohn marched in bearing the flags. After the pledge of allegiance, Sherrice Neil and April Williams set the mood by singing a capella, the "Star Spangled Banner." Afterward Miss Neil said, "I was proud to be a part of a program that honored those who have done their part to preserve our freedom." Louis Robinson commented, "I liked the chapel, but I especially liked it when Miss Neil and April Williams sang the National Anthem."

Mr. Neumann related stories about how his life was miraculously spared many times during the Vietnam War.

Mr. Croft told about how being recognized as a Christian affected him when he served in the Persian Gulf War.

Elder McLean, who ran off to join the army at the very end of World War II, told of the times he disobeyed orders because of his faith. It wasn't easy being a Seventh-day-Adventist.

"It was neat to hear Mr. McLean getting upset with his dad, because I just could never think of him doing that. I liked to hear the stories from the others, too," said Natalie Carroll.

After listening to these stories, the students realized how very real war is, and how much of a sacrifice it is...

"...Land where my fathers died,--Land of the pilgrim's pride,--From every mountain side,--Let freedom ring!"

Elder McLean-- Facing a New Challenge

Faculty

"I have gotten to know Elder McLean this year as both a teacher and employer. He's been very understanding when I've had troubles at work and in the classroom. I appreciate his understanding and his dynamic way of life," commented Andrew Taylor.

Ask any senior what they think of Elder Orlin McLean, and you will receive many answers. One word you will hear over and over, though, is "respect."

In 1976, Orlin McLean was invited to come and teach senior Bible at Auburn Adventist Academy. At first, he wasn't sure he wanted to come. He was at a good school and had friends and a comfortable lifestyle at Mt. Vernon Academy. Slowly, though, God opened doors for him. Before he fully understood what was going on, Elder McLean found himself teaching in the North West.

The students agree that, although, most of his classes are challenging, they get a lot out of them. Elder McLean teaches senior speech, psychology and Bible, which is a required senior class. "I enjoy his classes because I find them mentally stimulating," announced Julie Schultz. He also helped organize the Sabbath School program for the Auburn Academy Church and started a Bible study group that met once a week. "He is one of the spiritual leaders of this school," stated Debra Bredall.

Elder McLean has been deeply involved in this school. Now, we are saying "good bye" to this wonderful man. After 16 years at Auburn, and a total of 42 years in the church work, he is ready for retirement. He and his wife, parents of three grown children, will face new challenges as they relocate to a home in the country near Gentry, Arkansas. We will miss Elder McLean and all the encouragement and dedication that he has represented.

Almost ten years ago a gentleman in Spokane gave an old academy yearbook to the McKeys because they had once taught at that school. Discovered in the tattered pages of that old yearbook were two vaguely familiar faces--a dark-haired Orlin McLean and a demure Amelia Wines. In 1945 their pictures appeared among the graduates of Shelton Academy, now Platte Valley Academy, in Shelton, Nebraska. They met and started dating during their senior year and kept in touch by mail while Elder McLean served in the army. About three and a half years after these senior pictures were taken, they were married and settled at Union College in Lincoln, Nebraska. --Photo reproduction by Mr. Allen

Mission Statement

Auburn Adventist Academy exists to nurture students in the ways of Christ by opening avenues of knowledge, skills, values and service. Through competent, compassionate teaching we endeavor to guide students that they may become of Christ convicted, to Christ committed, for Christ compelled.

In November 1991 the Auburn Adventist Academy mission statement was put into action, as Mr Culmore stated, "To help us focus on a direction."

Years of Service

Where did you go when you needed a quick answer to a question? Some Tylenol for a head ache? Or a schedule for home leave?

For many years Mrs. Nelson, the principal's secretary, was our knight in shining armor--always there to help when a question needed answering.

Mrs. Noreen Nelson came to Auburn in October of 1986, when Mr.

"Our knight in shining armor.."

Wentland was principal.

Unfortunately, she had to leave this year in November. She moved down to Bakersfield, California, so she and her husband could be closer to her daughter and her family.

It is true that we all miss Mrs. Nelson, but we are certain she will bring joy to those around her wherever she goes.

--T. Hoffman

Making the school look good was Mrs. Nelson's strong point. Her friendliness and professionalism on the phone and in person left a good impression on students and strangers alike. # Together We Learn

"I can't believe we have only one class together! Last year we were together in nearly all our classes!"

The many classes available lead to a great variety of class schedules.

Classes offered vary from basic physical education to Introduction to Engineering for college credit. Although students must take certain required courses, they also have the opportunity to choose from some different options. For example, fine arts courses include classes that focus on vocal, instrumental, or visual art. Students are able to select courses that both meet present interests and prepare them for aspects of the future.

Even the number of students in classes has a lot of variety. Marina Nepstad's water aerobics class has only one other person. She enjoys the small size because "it's more relaxed." Marci Hunter likes her small classes because "the teachers and students feel free to be more friendly." Many people find it easier to express their ideas in smaller groups.

A larger number of students in classes also has advantages. Each student brings different characteristics and opinions. With more people, more ideas are added together to broaden the whole class's outlook.

Angie Ritz stated that "You can get a well-rounded education." Together, the variety of classes provides a stronger learning experience.

Discovery in Religion

Auburn Academy was founded on the belief of a Christian education. We receive that education to the fullest in the various Bible classes taught by Elder Orlin McLean, Mr. Walter Koehn and Pastor Roger Worley.

Elder McLean, who teaches senior Bible, tries to emphasize hard work and dedication through tough assignments like writing a personal philosophy of life. He also teaches his students how to define their talents and values so that they'll be able to choose a career that would best suit them.

Mr. Koehn teaches the junior Bible classes. Here

he focuses in depth on Revelation and the seven churches. This is helpful to the students in understanding the events of the last days, or the time before the second coming.

Pastor Worley teaches both freshmen and sophomore Bible classes. When asked what he liked the best about it here, he replied, "I enjoy being part of the on going discovery of what it means to be a Christian." The subjects that are emphasized the most in his classes are the church and the history of the Seventh-day Adventists.

History is also an important part of our education. Pastor Worley teaches a class of Washington state history. Contemporary world problems, U.S. history, and Washington state history are taught by Mr. Miller, who is so enthusiastic about history that he even takes students on a Northwest history tour.

College credit is offered in Elder McLean's psychology class, where students receive an introduction to psychology. Also, students get a chance to better understand the workings of the human mind.

Let's Get Musical

There are many different kinds of lessons offered here at Auburn, and one of the most popular kind is music.

Keyboard lessons are given by Jeanene Miller. "Piano lessons are helpful because they discipline you and make you act more responsible. Mrs. Miller is a really fun teacher, and she challenges you to do your best," said Michelle Price.

Brandon Beck is the band and instrumental teacher. "I am very glad they offer music lessons here. Mr. Beck is a good teacher and really cares about your success," said you to do your best."

one band student.

"Mr. Neumann is a very inspiring man. He really helps you learn the music," said one choir student about Mr. John Neumann, who teaches choir and voice.

Teaching strings this year is Kay Smith. "It's lots of fun. Mrs. Smith is great," exclaimed Holly Utt, a violin student.

With such a wide variety the students are better able to learn to appreciate different kinds of music.

Chemistry-Algebra-Physics

Teachers Try To Help Us Understand

"Where are we going to use THIS in later life?" That's probably the most frequently asked question concerning topics in such classes as chemistry, algebra, and geometry. "Why do we need to know that Pb is the symbol for lead? What is so important about matrices? When will we use the Pathagorean Thereom?"

Although it might not seem that there's a point to learning all of this right now, it probably comes in handy later on in life. Teachers seem to realize this because some of them go to great lengths to help us understand. Miss Toop compares the replacement reactions to the exchanging of banquet dates. Mr. Priest takes the time to learn about the personality of each student, then relates new mathematical ideas with something they're interested in. Mr. Allen is definitely one of a kind. Paul Sharp commented, "He tells hilarious stories that make physics interesting."

Some of these subjects come easily while some demand a struggle, but nobody walks away without having learned something new by the end of the year.

Friendly Languages

Among the language classes offered are French I and II, Spanish I and II, English I, II, and III, and several writing classes, as well as many E.S.L. classes.

French and Spanish are brought to us by Panamanian native Renan Serrano. Mr. Serrano just recently learned French so that more languages could be offered. Karin Gall said, "I've always wanted to learn French.

It's a beautiful language and I love it. It's something different than taking Spanish."

Mr. Bahnsen is in charge of E.S.L., or English as a Second Language. This program is offered so that our foreign students can take classes that match their comprehension of English.

Mrs. Kobberstad teaches writing and freshman English, while Mrs. Bahnsen teaches sophomore and some junior English classes. Mrs. Zbaraschuck also teaches English III and a variety of English classes for seniors.

Physically Fit Are Us...

The students at Auburn have learned to better appreciate physical fitness through health classes, the many P.E. classes offered, and yes, even through the infamous health check.

Freshmen and sophomores learn right away the benefits of being physically fit in Mr. Kil-gore's freshmen P.E. and health classes. Upperclassmen also have the opportunity to stay in shape through the many other P.E. classes offered.

There are many students, however, who even though they may appreciate it, still don't like it and were excited to hear the health check become optional. Taresa Acker readily replied when asked how she felt, "It's a good idea. There are lots of us who like to know if we're healthy or not." Many agreed that since there is going to be the option they will enjoy exercising their choice.

Getting Away From the 3 R's...

Auburn students are offered some very important classes for survival and enjoyment in our world today.

Subjects that will definitely help us later on are personal computing and computer programming taught by Mr. McKey. Eager students learn everything from word processing to graphics. They also learn about how these sometimes frustrating computers came into existence.

Typing is very useful, also. This is taught by Mr.

Art taught by Mr. Schallig is also available. As in any other class there is lots of work, both in and out of the classroom. Students can learn anything from how to create basic drawings to more detailed paintings and sketchings.

These classes and others offer students a basic background in whatever career they may choose.

Fun with Basics

There are a variety of technical and essential living skills taught here at Auburn. Mr. Allen teaches several classes including Photography I and II, CADD, drafting, physics, and an introduction to engineering. Physics and engineering deal with formulas used to solve problems, common or otherwise. CADD and drafting explore various ways to solve graphic problems, and in photography students learn the finer arts of picture taking and developing.

Mrs. Kilgore teaches foreign foods, advanced foods, child development, and the section A of essential living skills classes. She also teaches an individualized language arts class, where the students can receive extra help.

Together We Serve

From work opportunities to Sabbath afternoon hikes, many activities offer a chance for every student to be involved. The variety of interests among students necessitates many options.

Spiritual activities include Weeks of Prayer, caroling, Campus Ministries activities and weekend programs. These provide students with chances to focus on spiritual matters and to serve others. Often people from outside the school come to speak or perform. "It's a benefit to the school and helps spiritual growth when other people come in," explained Walter Cox.

Jobs range from clerical work to hands-on involvement at the cafeteria. The school tries to find employment for all students. Besides the obvious benefit of helping to pay the tuition, these work activities offer other benefits, too. Julie Schultz feels that she has gained "good experience being an employee." Some jobs provide opportunity to learn how to use office equipment and others give chances to learn about maintaining the facilities. All the jobs provide a way for students to develop skills in efficiency and dealing with other people.

Social events also take place for the students. Banquets and Saturday night programs are just a few of the chances for students to get together and have fun.

These activities all help the students to have more fun as individuals and draw together to form a stronger group.

Jobs That Keep the Peace

Among the many responsible jobs on campus are the office workers, library workers, and RA's.

The office workers help with the grading and recording of papers. Sometimes they tutor students and perform other tasks that keep the teachers sane.

Library workers are responsible for keeping the library quiet, and helping people find books and information to check out.

RA's reinforce the silence during study hall at night in the dorms, along with other tasks that keep the dorms running smoothly. They also have to be an example to the other students on their hall. Angel Condon commented, "Sometimes it feels like you are on the job 24 hours a day."

The Mighty Work Force

The maintenance/grounds crew does a lot for our campus. They repair damages, keep the lawns trimmed, and keep the flower beds clean. They do their best to keep up with the never ending tasks.

Our administration building janitors regularly patrol the halls in search of the foul presence of litter, dirty windows, and full trash cans, leaving us free to travel by foot from class to class without worrying what strange beast could be hiding under those pieces of paper. "I find my job to be quite the pleasant job because I have a fine work supervisor. Mr. Heupel is a very nice man," stated Rick Collins.

The workers at the industries, Six-Pac, and Sea Tac Pac handle goods that find their way to the outside world. Six Pac manufactures plastic and aluminum canopies for pickups. Big, small, custom or standard sizes are available. This gives students a feeling of working at a "real" job and gives students skills they may use later in life.

Off-campus Jobs

The Cafeteria or McDonald's?

Though most students work on campus--some decide that an off campus job is better for them. The main reason most people have an off-campus job is, of course, MONEY. Sarah Castello stated, "An off-campus job gives you a chance to make more money than what you would be making at school."

There are disadvantages to not working on campus. Jessie Robinson explained, "You don't get as much time to do things like recreation or other activities. Your boss isn't as understanding."

Some very brave people

...is...

manage to juggle two jobs--one at school and one in the evening or on the weekend. Why would someone want to work two jobs plus have to deal with school work? Charla Wiggins explained, "Since my parents don't give me any money for working on campus I work to get spending money."

Whether flipping burgers at McDonald's or selling clothes at the mall--not one complaint was made about off-campus jobs.

Dorm Vs. Village? The question is, which is better? Well, there are pros and cons with both.

Because dorm residents live with friends all the time and have no parents around, you might think it is just a big slumber party. The students need to show responsibility and co-operation just as though they were living anywhere else. They have to get along and be supportive of others around them. While living in the dorm, students may develop closer friendships and be more involved in things that go on at the school, but village kids can go home to mom's cooking. They also have the freedom of watching T.V., listening to the radio whenever they please, and spending time with family.

Natalie Carroll said, "I don't think anybody can say which is better. The grass is always greener on the other side of the fence."

Sarah Chadwick said, "I like being around friends in the dorm, but I would like to be village so I could do my own thing and go places with my village friends."

Alice Hall reflected on dorm life, "It's not what I'm used to, and it's going to take some getting use to, but my roommate Scara (Sarah Chadwick) makes me laugh."

Andy Duncan commented, "I'm glad I'm village not dorm, because it's nice to be able to go out and not be bothered by faculty."

Paul Sharp could see the advantage of both, "I like being dorm because I'm away from home, but I would like to be village, too so I could go places." Most students are happy with where they are and make the most of their year.

Together We Worship God

Our advantage of attending a Christian school is sometimes taken for granted.

God is important in our everyday lives. Even though work, school, and stress may keep us from our time with Him, the school provides different programs for us to attend to remind us how important it is to have fellowship with the Lord.

Every week we have chapel. This is a time for announcements and singing, but it's also a time to reflect on God in our lives. "Chapels are good for our social life. And I think they are good for our teenage lives. It helps us make better decisions for our lives," said Pheobe Naki-

We also have Weeks-of-Prayer. During this week we have two meetings every day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. In October Pastor Charlie Lui, pastor of the Loma Linda Church, came to be our week-of-prayer speaker. He used parables from the Bible that, when told, held his listeners at the edge of their seats. Students asked Pastor Lui questions which he answered very honestly. Shelley Nicol exclaimed, "It was good and I liked it! I liked the way he answered the questions."

On Friday nights, the vespers programs helped provide a spiritual introduction to Sabbath. Afterglow, a special after-vepers option, encouraged students to get to know God through prayer, singing, and fellowship.

The school included faculty home vespers. Groups of about ten kids went to a faculty member's home for an evening filled with fun, food, and friends, for a "home" vespers. This was enjoyable for kids and staff alike. "I like faculty home vespers because it gives me a chance to get to know the staff and students better, since I'm new," stated Alice Hall.

All these activities help us together to become close to God.

Together We Share

What is one of the best ways to have fun, make new friends and feel good about yourself?

Getting Involved!

Organizations provide chances to do just that. Students can belong to groups that perform on campus or on tour. These organizations help students share their talents and express art. Julie Schultz enjoys being a member of Sylvan because, "It's like a family. I feel involved."

Casa Loma and Zetta Kappa officers

plan activities like amateur hours, special brunches and banquets. These give students chances to share their talents and share time with friends and family.

Publications give another way for students to share. Members of the Rainier Echoes staff become very involved in reporting about things that happen on campus. Curtis Persons expressed his enthusiasm with "I love it!...You get to write about things going on at this school." The staff of Rainier Vista, the yearbook, work together to produce something that many students cherish for years to come.

Every student enrolled in the school belongs to the Associated Student Body. This organization provides the opportunity to be an officer and plan fun activities for all the students.

These organizations provide students with many chances to share together in fun and friendship.

Move That Body

A double-backhanded-twisted what?

Gymnastics! To some people it's practically their life. They work every chance they get on new moves and fun stunts. Others may look at it as inhuman. How can people make their bodies do that?

Amy Ford said, "I love twisting myself like a pretzel!"

But no matter how you look at it gymnastics takes skill and lots of practice.

Here at Auburn there are opportunities for those who are just beginning to develop skills, and a team for those who are more advanced.

The ideal gymnastics team has twenty-four members, 12 guys and 12 girls, though this varies some.

This team does a variety of shows and tours including a home show.

It takes team work to make the team come together. This includes hours of practice sometimes on the same thing. But if a show is well done, it all pays for itself.

"I really enjoy the leadership qualities demonstrated by Jamie McPherson, boys' captain, and Raema Rafuse, girls' captain," commented James Culmore, one of the members on the team.

Together We Play

Hurdling through the air, the ball speeds toward you. Smack! You send the ball back. The whistle sounds. Your teammate yells, "We won!"

This hard-playing fun gives an exhilaration that can't be matched for most students. Adrenaline rushes and pushing oneself just a little harder add to the atmosphere created by cheering friends and the desire to play better.

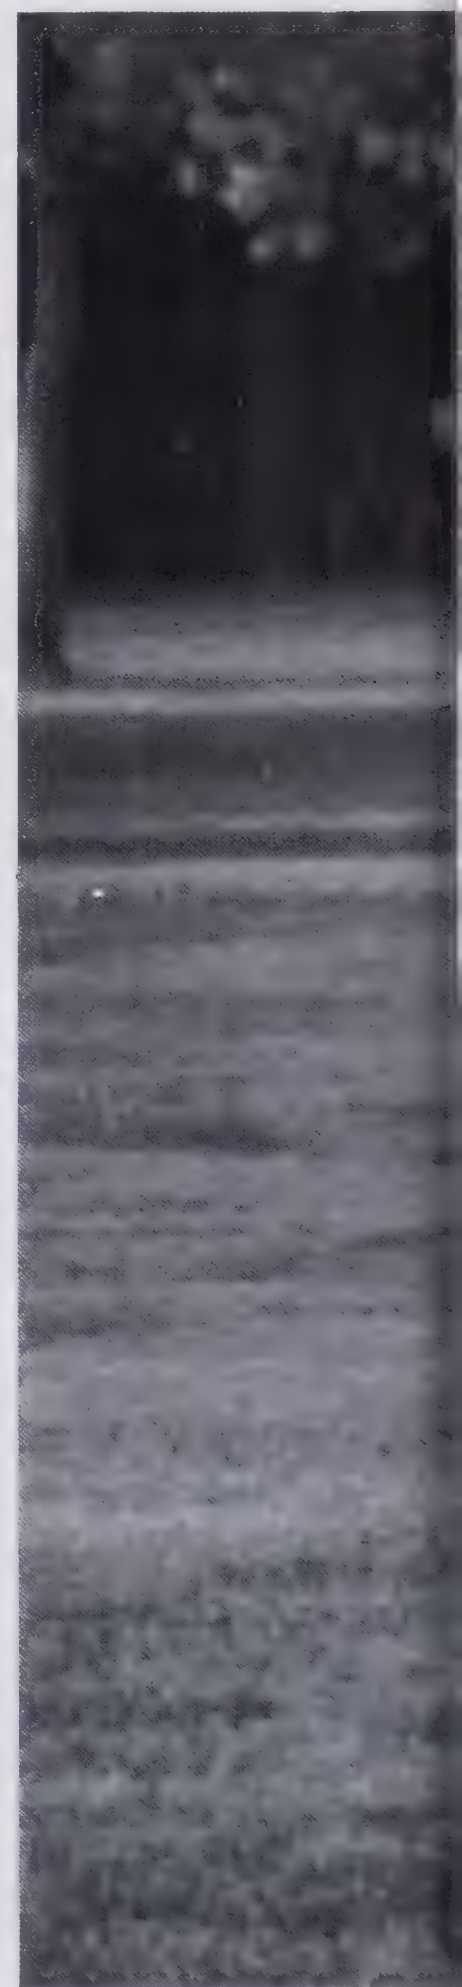

Benefits from being involved in the athletic program range from better physical fitness to better mental fitness. Many sports promote muscle tone and cardiovascular endurance. Exposure to fresh air and sunlight is another bonus to taking part in the outdoor sports. The physical activity helps reduce stress for students, thus making life a little happier and carefree.

Social contact in the sports program gives students a chance to boost self confidence, make new friends, and develop relationships with others. As one of his reasons for taking part in the athletic program, Brice Thompson said, "I like sports. You can associate with others and have a good time."

Involvement in sports, team and individualized, promotes fitness for both our bodies and minds. Our lives are better because of the time we spend together in play.

The pictures on the following pages give a brief glimpse of what the seniors of 1993 looked like as they started their school years. Although each person has grown and undergone great changes individually, the class also took advantage of the chance to grow together through the years.

Moving On . . . . . . Looking Back

We stood in line together at registration. We sat in class together daily. Learning, growing, playing, and sharing—these are all things we experienced together. We can look back and remember the times when friendship made it all worth it. Our experiences together made the year special for each of us, and made it possible for us to see the year come to a close. We can always remember how together we became friends.
